P523 · UPDATE

TL;DR — Some fellas said the app was hard to read. Fixed in three layers: (1) the app now respects your phone's system text-size setting, (2) the two narrative screens — match report + help — got a small universal bump, and (3) there's a new Compact / Regular / Large toggle on Profile so anyone can nudge it bigger. All three stack on top of each other.

► Three levers, layered

LEVER 1

Match report + Help got a small bump

Body text on the match-report and help-article pages went from 13 → 14pt; the report summary lede went from 14 → 16pt. Help article paragraphs went 14 → 15pt. Universal — no opt-in.

LEVER 2

Text-size toggle on Profile

New card under Notifications: Compact · Regular · Large. Default is Compact (today's look — nothing changes). Regular is +10%, Large is +20%. Applies instantly, saved per device.

LEVER 3

Respect the phone's own text setting iOS Settings → Safari → Page Zoom and Android Accessibility → Font Size now flow through to the app. Set your phone once, every app respects it — WF now included.

► The Profile toggle — what you'll see

Text size

Bigger text throughout the app — takes effect instantly. Set back to Compact any time to restore the default look.

Each button shows a preview at the size it'll pick. Preference is saved on the device you set it from — swap phones and set it there too.

► What actually changed on the report page

Mikel Winter — two goals, and it took a top-corner rocket that would win any game to finally break Ross's resistance.

Beau Samuels — late addition after father Martyn pulled out, and rewarded the shout with two goals for Kaya Elkiner FC.

Same words, more air. Body text one point bigger, lines with a touch more breathing room. If you're on Regular or Large in Profile, this bump layers on top of that too.

► How the three layers stack

iOS / Android base font	=	16px (or your phone's setting if raised)
× Profile toggle (Compact / Regular / Large)	×	100% / 110% / 120%
+ Report + Help page bumps	+	extra point on prose pages
= What you actually see	→	Comfortable for you, not everyone else

The stack is compositional. A player with iOS text set to Larger who also picks Large in Profile ends up meaningfully bigger than default — and the layout expands with them rather than clipping.

► What we deliberately didn't change

- Ceefax-style tables — teams roster, finance rows, admin panels. The dense mono look is the aesthetic, and the readability complaints weren't about numbers-in-columns.
- Badges, pills, page IDs — meant to stay small and out of the way; scaling them ruins the visual hierarchy.
- Muted grey text colour — checked the contrast against the dark background, comes in at 7.4:1 (AAA). Not the bottleneck.

► Where to go next

- Try the toggle: Profile → Text size. Poke Regular for a few days; if it feels good, Large is right there too.
- Setting your phone's system text size once means every app you use — WhatsApp, mail, banking — respects it. That's the real fix if you've been squinting anywhere.
- Something still hard to read? Ping admin with which screen — targeted spot-fixes are cheap now the plumbing's in place.
